Buying a phone alone is expensive, but sending it to repair every week will make it even more expensive and embarrassing at the same time. A lot of times I was almost ready to give up on smartphones with touch screens and just move back to the old Nokia that just doesn't break even if you smashed it against the wall.

I've been using a 6S since 2015 (this thread caught my interest because it's now somewhat of a Ship of Theseus as I've replaced so many parts over the years), but the 11 Pro I bought last year was the first time a multi-year-gap upgrade felt rather incremental, especially for $1100. I returned it and expect to continue to use and repair the 6S until they drop iOS support for it.
